Character Sketch

In the dirty subways of New York City there lived a man named Adam Zapple. He was skinny and wore ragged old clothes. Besides the old clothes he was well groomed. His hair was cut and he had a clean shave. Adam didn't smell too bad considering that he lived in a New York City subway. Mr. Zapple spent most of his time patrolling the subway looking for anything useful that commuters may have dropped. He slept on a bench and carried a torn duffle bag that he found in a garbage can. He kept most of his belongings in his duffle bag and always kept the duffle bag by his side. He had taken over one of the stalls in the bathroom, he kept his shaving equipment and a comb in the stall. Adam would lock the stall from inside and crawl underneath the door so nobody else could use it. Mr. Zapple was a very kind and gentle man and made many friends in the subway. Most of his friends were everyday commuters who took the train to work and back home. They would exchange a few words with Adam Zapple while waiting for their train to arrive. Adam was also friends with the people who worked in the subway, especially Susan who worked at the ticket counter and brought Adam lunch everyday.
